

Having worked the world as an amateur radio operator on less than one watt, what happens when we start interfering with other countries of the planet. Will the ham be held responsible for interference when his or her signal mixes in with BPL and caused it to be unusable? Why have all other countries that have tried BPL abandoned it?